In a town not far from Glasgow, one of the sillies, while engaged the other day with some other of the members of the Board of Health, in the superintending the fitting up a temporary hospital, exclaimed; O, it will be desperate if that cholera disna come here after we've been at sae muckle trouble an' expense fur't.

From the Boston Gazette.

A most Barbarous and Unfeeling Act.

The Cholera seems to have deprived some people of their reason and humanity. Take the following as a sample: Mr. David Ballou, aged 85 years was on a Journey from Ohio to Cumberland, R. I. his native town. From New York where he tarried one night he took passage in a steam boat for New Haven. After leaving the boat he took a seat in a stage for Providence.

During his ride he was taken sick. The stage passengers were alarmed and attempts were made to leave him out but no body would receive him, for fear of the Cholera. In this critical situation he was denied a seat inside the stage—was taken out and lashed on the top, and in this way was brought into Providence. But the old man's cup of calamity and suffering was not yet full. No person there would grant him even a shelter and the next morning he was found on the market house steps. At length he prevailed on a person for the sum of five dollars, to carry him to his brother's, in Cumberland. By this time he had become so exhausted that he was unable to sit up, and was supported by the driver. His brother's family were no less alarmed than his former companions. He was refused admittance into the house, but was conveyed to the barn to be nursed while a messenger was despatched to Woonsocket Falls for a phisician who had just returned from New York. Before he arrived Mr. B. was dead.

S. J. SYLVESTER, Baltimor

Our readers will doubtless recollect a notice published in this paper on the 13th ult. of the mysterious disappearance of two little boys, one 9 and the other 5 years old, children of Jeremiah and Phebe Clark. It appears the children had wandered down to the steamboat and had got on board and were taken to New York, where they were afterwards found by their anxious mother who went there in search of them. Soon after Mrs. Clark returned with her children to this place, she was attacked with the cholera on the 27th ult. and died the same day. Her husband was attacked with the same disease, and died on the following day. Two days after their little orphan daughter aged two and a half years was seized with cholera and died; and the next day after the funeral, one of the boys who had been lost was attacked with the same epidemic, and is also dead; thus between the 27 ult. and the 2d inst. almost the whole family was swept away by the pestilence.—*Newark N.
