Poetry.

FROM THE WASHINGTON MODERATOR

—oo—

THE FARMER,

Of all pursuits by man invented,
The ploughman is the best contented,
His calling's good, his profits high,
And on his labor all rely.

Mechanics all by him are fed,
Of him the merchants seek their bread—
His hand gives meat to every thing,
Up from the beggar to the kind.

The milk and honey, corn and wheat,
Are by his labor made complete—
Our clothes from him must first arise,
To deck the fool, to dress the wise.

We then by vote may justly state,
The ploughman ranks among the great;
More independent than they all,
That dwell upon this earthly ball.

All hail ye farmers, young and old!
Push on your plough with courage bold—
Your wealth arises from your clod,
Your independence from your God.

If then the plough supports the nation,
And men of rank in every station,
Let kings to farmers make a bow,
And every man procure a plough.

FROM THE FREDERICK TIMES.

—::—

The following enigma was made by Miss Seward, and found in her will, with the direction to her executors to pay fifty pounds to the person who should discover the true solution. It yet remains a mystery in England and Scotland.

The noblest object in the works of art,
The brightest gem which nature can impart,
The point essential in a lawyer's lease,
The well-known signal in the time of peace
The ploughman, when he drives his plough;
The soldier's duty, and the lover's vow,
The planet seen between the earth and sun,
The prize which merit never yet has won,
The miser's treasure, and the badge of Jews
The wife's ambition, and the Parson's dues.

Now, if your noble spirit can divine
A corresponding word for every line,
By all these letters, clearly will be shown
An ancient city of no small renown,

Singular Verdict,

An inquest was recently held upon the body of a man found dead in a cellar, where he had taken shelter in Montreal, and a verdict returned by the jury, that he "died of Misery."

WOMAN.

As the dew lies longest & produces most fertility in the shade of domestic retirement, so woman sheds around her path richer & more permanent blessings than man, who is more exposed to the glare and observation of public life—the humble and retired often yield more valuable benefits to society than the noisy and bustling satellites of earth, whose very light of unconcealed enjoyment paralyzes and parches up the moral soil it flows over,

The famous thief-catcher and tutier, Vidocq, has just taken out a patent in Paris for the manufacture of a paper from which writing or printing, when once impressed, can never be effaced. This is about the worst thing that could happen to most writers.

A London paper says sugar is now becoming a universal ingredient in many of our soups in ordinary use, such as soup cressi gravy soup, &c. being found to add greatly to their flavor and wholesomeness.

A CURIOUS CASE.

In a Brussels paper it is stated that a man reported himself to the police as having stolen a set of golden ear-rings "from the lady of his love," and demanded a committal to prison. After summoning the lady, her testimony gave the lie to his representation & alleged that it was only a plan of his to prevent the performance of his promise to marry her—preferring confinement in the loathsome walls of a prison, to being united to a lovely woman.

An unusually numerous meeting of all parties was held at Newark N. J. on Monday last, at which several strong resolutions were adopted disapproving of the removal of the deposits, and reprobating in very indignant terms the conduct of those of the representatives of New Jersey who voted for that measure. A memorial to Congress expressive of those feelings was adopted together with a call upon their Congressional representatives to exert their influence in attaining the object of that memorial.

Party Discipline.

From the U S. Gazette

We have already stated that the resolutions approving of the removal of the deposites, which have been adopted by three legislatures, were the "drawings" of the party collar, urged by the executive of K. C. whip from Washington. This, it will be recollected, was avowed in Columbus, Ohio—it is not denied in Albany and now we will see what face the matter assumes in Trenton.

On Wednesday, the legislature assembled with barely a quorum. On Thursday, some talk of the resolutions was purposely made, and it was ascertained by those who had them in their pockets, that there was a part of the Jackson men who were opposed to such a procedure. On Friday a caucus was called, the resolutions were read, & before any serious opposition could be offered, the collar was pointed to,

"What were you sent to Trenton for, but to sustain General Jackson and his measures?"

"But we were elected before the effects of this measure were well understood.

"Will you wear the collar, or leave the pack?

"We will——wear the collar."

On Saturday, the resolutions were introduced, all rules were dispensed with, both houses adopted the resolutions, and it is thought that they were on their way back to Washington before one o'clock.

Some time since there appeared in the Inquirer of this city, a letter from Washington, in which was a paragraph of the following tenor;

The sum paid for advertising to F. P. Blair, was 42,000 dollars during the last two years, for the Post Office Department—for the Department of State, nearly 90,000 for the treasury department, nearly 6,000—for the Navy, nearly 12,000, &c. amounts in some instances equivalent to all paid to other establishments throughout the the Union.

We noticed it at the time, and thinking that the correspondent had made some mistake, or was misinformed as to the character of the charges by the publisher of the Globe, we did not think it best to lay the charge before our readers. The piece however, has been freely circulated in the news papers, and has not, to our knowledge been contradicted by the Globe.

It is a charge against the United States Bank Directors, that they spent a portion of the stockholder's extra profits in paying newspapers for publishing documents to sustain those stockholders' interests.

The general government, under pretence of circulating advertisements, has paid within a short time, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to circulate the political matter of the Globe. It appears to us that it is about time for the people to issue a scire facias,

Meaning of Letters.

The witty Lord C——waa (as all the world knows) betrothed to Caroline Maria Somers. The initials of this lady (C.M.S.) were elegantly embosomed on a very expensive time-piece which he had presented to her. The lady, however, did not keep time as well as the watch; she saw another swain with more money—married him of course—and Lord C——who was at the wedding, being asked the meaning of the three letters, on the ornament, replied,—"Curse My Stupidity."

The following verses appear written as a sign-board over the door of a barber's shop, in the Soke, near the Rising Sun public house, on the road to Arelsford, Hampshire;

Beautiful Quotation.

The Rev. D. Griffin in his speech before the American Education Society appealed to the sex, who like ministering angels, love to hover about the chambers of sickness; who owe so much to Christianity—and introduced this beautiful quotation—

Not she with trait'rous kiss her Savio'r stung
Not she denied him, with unholy tongue—
She, when apostles shrunk, could danger brave,
Last at the cross, and earliest at the grave,

An anti Duelling association has been established at Savannah, Geo.

La Fayette, it is said, is coming to pay us another visit.

From a N, York paper

In a case of seduction tried during the past week, between Bruwell Betts, father of Sarah Betts, and Oliver Coles, Defendant in the Supreme Court of New York, the jury gave a verdict of ten thousand dollars against the defendant—a verdict than which if the report of the case published in this morning's Courier be at all accurate—one more unjust, and unsustained by evidence, was never pronounced—the party injured was, it appears, 24 years of age, had been duly warned of her danger, yet continued to admit the addresses of the alleged seducer & was content to live with him in a state of concubinage for six years—and tt was only when this disgraceful connection was broken off by the defendant—that the father of the woman brought this suit. All this savors much more of the spirit of injured innocence, or virtuous indignation, or humble contrition.

The following curious advertisement appears in the Portland Courier;

For Sale, or to give away.—A good cow, about 5 years old, that sucks all her own milk, thereby saving the milk maid a great deal of trouble. She will be sold a bargain if applied for soon, and hay enough thrown in to cary her through the winter—Inquire at this office.

From the Temperance Recorder

The trial of Alcohol,

ALIAS ARDENT SPIRITS.

Charged with Murder, Robbery, &c. Suprem e Court of Public Opinion, in and for the United states of America.

THE PEOPLE vs. ALCOHOL.

Cross Examination.

Att, Gen. Mr. Lovegain what is your occupation?

Wit, I am a merchant and manufacturer sir.

At, Gen, What do you manufacture chiefly?

Wit. New England rum, for the most part, though I have one establish for making whiskey. I also do a good deal at brewing ale and beer—besides something at making different sorts of wine.

Att, Gen. Then you and the prisoner have expensive dealings do you not?

Wit, Yes we trade some.

Att, Geen. do you derive any profit——

An, ap. I object to that question. It does not affect the merits of the cause before the court.

Att, Gen May it please you honor if the question does not affect the cause it affects the testimony of the witness. I wish to show the jury—

Chief Justice. Pardon me for interrupting you; but there is no necessity for argument. The question is perfectly proper, and must be answered.

Att, Gen. Mr, Lovegain, do you derive any profit from the prisoners employments, and if so, how?

Wit, Why sir, he always puts up with me, and when people call for him in case of sickness, or on any other occasion, they are bound to pay me, and I retain all that does not go to Diabolus Magnus, which you may depend on it, is much the greatest part. So that it dont seem to me that I feel much bias after all.

Att, Gen, I have no more questions to ask, but witness you will not retire. May it please the court, I move for a bench warrant to issue gainst Mr. Lovegain as an accomplice with the prisoner at the bar.

Chief Justice. It is granted. Mr; Sheriff will take him into his custody till it is prepared, Let the trial proceed.

The next witness called was Mr. Simple

An, ap. Mr. Simple are you acquainted with my client.

Wit, I am sir, and a nice, clever body he is too. I have known him these twenty years.

An, ap, Do you know any thing of his being guilty of any of the crimes and misdemeanors charged upon him in the indictment?

Wit Dear me, no sir, I never have seen any such things in him, but in my family he has always conducted himself with a great deal of moderation. He has furnished me with a great deal of his medicine, for we have always been a very sickly family of us. And then he was always so willing to come when we wanted him, and was so attentive. I am sure I am under great obligations to him for his good will.

An, ap, Mr, Simple, do you know any thing of a conspiracy against my client with the avowed object of driving him from the country?

Att, Gen, May it please the court—there is no necessity of any testimony upon this point, the fact is admitted that there is a design formed to suppress the villainous proceedings of the accused and to follow him through all his windings and subterfuges, till he is brought to justice.

An ap, Then we have no more questions to ask this witness.

Cross Examination.

Att Gen, Mr. Simple, what is your occupation?

Wit, I am a farmer sir, a plain farmer.

Att Gen, Did you ever employ the prisoner to assist you in your farming business?

Wit, Yes sir, always—I never could do my work without his help—The preparations of Mr. Alcohol are always of great service to me; they do me good I never use them to excess as great many do and [illegible] at all without one or [illegible] cordial, or his ake [illegible]

Att Gen, How [illegible] Simple, that you could not live without them?

Wit, Why sir, I have always been in the habit of using them, and I feel so much better when I take them—they do me good I know they do,

Att Gen, But Mr, Simple, you say you know how you would feel if you laid them entirely aside? You have made but one experiment yet—and therefore you cannot tell what might be your feeling in other circumstances—But you wealthy Mr. Simple?

Wit, No sir my property has been diminishing for some years: till now I am quite reduced, and shall be able to leave my children little or nothing.

Att Gen, What do you think is the cause of your loss of property?

Wit, I do not know, unless it be sickness in my family—I have paid hundreds of dollars for the attendance of Mr. Alcohol, and I always did it cheerfully—He has been as good as a physician in my family.

Att Gen. How many children have you Mr. Simple?

Wit, Six, sir two sons and four daughters,

Att, Gen, Your sons are steady industrious young men, are they not and a comfort to you in your old age?

Wit. No sir they are not much comfort to me or to themselves

Att, Gen. Why not Mr. Simple?

Wit, Because, sir they drink too much sometimes, and go in bad company I have talked to them a great deal, but it does no good as I see, they will have their own way.

Att, Gen. Mr. Simple I wish to ask you if you do not occasionally drink too much—sometimes become quite intoxicated?

Wit, I believe I have sometimes accidentally when I have been out in the cold, or have drank after having been without eating all day.

Att, Gen, You can sit down sir.

A large number of witnesses were examined in behalf of the accused, but as their evidence was nothing different from that already given by those whose examinations we have detailed it is not necessary to publish it Inasmuch—therefore, as nothing could be elicited to remove or even render doubtful the mass of testimony adduced by the prosecution, Mr. Animal Appetite announced to the court that the counsel for the prisoner should submit the cause under the charge of the court, with no other remark than to request the jury and the whole court not to go to the extreme of the law with the defendant but to remember that he had till recently been esteemed as their friend—and was once the friend and cherished companion of their fathers—The attorney general in behalf of the people remarked that he should submit the case to the jury without any remark.

Chief Justice Candor then charged the jury as follows—

Gentlemen of the Jury—

My remarks in committing this cause to you will be brief—It cannot be necessary that I should read to your minds the various counts in the indictment—or the different parts of the very pointed testimony which has been adduced by the prosecution—as there has been in this case, no reference to presumptive evidence, it is not needful for me to recite to you rules in accordance to which such testimony is to be received and the points of law are all of so familiar a kind, that no instruction will, I think, be needful. All that remains for me to do, therefore, is to say to you that you are to consider the question guilty or not guilty, free from all bias or feeling which, from any peculiar circumstance, may have been likely to have influenced your judgements. You will regard the prisoner simply as an accused individual standing disconnected with any other individual; and according to law and evidence, you will each of you give your verdict of guilty or not guilty. Firmness, impartiality, and intelligence are requisite to the faithful discharge of the duties I now commit to your trust: and you will render your verdict without any regard or reference to consequents. With these remarks I commit the fate of the prisoner to you.

The jury without leaving the jury box, found the prisoner guilty on the whole indictment,
